KeyMacro is a small utility that keeps a record of the last 24 hours of media you've played with a keystroke. After you select your songs, they will be stored as a playlist file. When you select one of the songs, it will open in a media player with the file's name displayed. You can then press a key on your keyboard to play the song, or choose to have it automatically open to play the song. In addition to the playback functions, you can also add songs to your playlist at any time by pressing the keyboard's play key. To use KeyMacro, please install the VB6 Runtime files found here. Music is available at the following: I am working on getting other music sources as well. If you have a favorite you would like added, send me an email and I will get to it ASAP. If you are running out of time for the day or are at work (home is fine), just open up the streamer and it will play from the source it was last opened from. Changes in V1.0: 1. The file is now shorter in size and does not add as much data to the internet traffic. 2. Added an option to change the background music when the system tray icon is minimized. 3. Added a "Maximized to System Tray" option. 3. If the background music is set to match the system's time (which was previously coded to be the same as the clock), the music will no longer fade after the clock hits the hour mark. 4. If you have a "Trim Duration to Minutes" option, the music will no longer fade after the song is over. 5. If you are a visual person and want to see the song list, you can click the Icon's "Show List" option to open up a small window. 6. If you are a visual person and want to see the song list, you can click the Icon's "Show Info" option to open up a small window. 7. If you are a visual person and want to see the song list, you can click the Icon's "Show Song List" option to open up a small window. 8. The "Auto Refresh" option will now check at 4AM for changes to the music list. If changes are detected, the music list will be refreshed and any new songs added to the list will be played. 9. If you have an icon showing the music list, it will no longer cover up the main window when minimized. 10. To use all three options, just minimize the icon to the system tray, open it up, and click on the window's top right "Show Options" button. 11. The "Media Management" option will now show up if there is no other music playing. The "Media Management" window allows you to open up the My Music section in Windows Media Player. 12. The "Now Playing" window will no longer hide after
