Q: Prove that  $A \oplus B$  can be uniquely decomposed into a direct sum of  $A$  and  $B$ . Let  $A, B$  be real vector spaces. Prove that  $A \oplus B$  can be uniquely decomposed into a direct sum of  $A$  and  $B$ . A: What I mean is if  $A \oplus B$  is the direct sum of  $A$  and  $B$ , then there exist  $a_i \in A$  and  $b_i \in B$ , such that  $\sum_{i \in I} a_i = A$  and  $\sum_{i \in I} b_i = B$ . So  $A \oplus B$  can be uniquely decomposed into a direct sum of  $A$  and  $B$  because in this case it is just  $A \oplus B$ . Now to show that it is indeed unique, we can take a look at  $a \in A$  and  $b \in B$  (not necessarily distinct elements) and we will note  $a \oplus b$  will also define  $A \oplus B$ . Does this make sense?

.Qualification to own a firearm in South Africa Carrying a firearm in public - or in private, if you are a police officer - requires a permit. The permit is usually issued by a police station. However, in some cases a personal permit can be issued in the form of a deed of authorisation by the Minister of Justice and Correctional Services, or the local municipality. Applicants are typically checked for criminal records and mental health. One may also be required to pass a course in firearms safety and a shooting test. In some cases, applicants are required to attend a police station to have their fingerprints taken. If the fingerprints are still valid, the police may then be requested to obtain a printout of the biographical data from the SAPS National Police Database (at a fee of R80). Other information related to the applicant's background may be requested and checked, including the identity of the person who reported the applicant. The application for a permit is usually a form and may be delivered to the police station in a sealed envelope. As of December 2014, for persons born after 1 January 1994, one may only apply for a restricted firearm licence if one's date of birth is at least two years after 31 December 1995. Once an application for a permit has been accepted, the police may then collect personal data about the applicant, which may include information such as fingerprints, firearms and ammunition certifications, and a record of the applicant's identity, residence address, occupation, and other data specified by the Minister of Justice and Correctional Services. The police station may also charge a fee, ranging from R100 to R400, for the application. The fee is non-refundable and non-transferable. Once the application is accepted, the applicant is required to complete an application form and pay a non-refundable fee of R200. This application is then registered as a case. The applicant is then required to attend a firearms safety course, which is usually compulsory, and to pass a shooting test. In order to be issued with a full permit, the applicant must pass these tests and the police station is required to submit a report to the Minister of Justice and Correctional Services. Once the report is received by the minister, he or she may then grant or refuse a permit, depending on the circumstances. Mindfulness training and compassion training for adolescent offenders: a mixed methods pilot study. This exploratory study explored the effectiveness of a brief mindfulness and compassion training programme for adolescent in-patients in a juvenile detention centre. Four focus groups were held with six prison staff members. Semi-structured individual interviews were conducted with four adolescent boys and one adolescent girl. Twelve adolescent offenders completed pre- and post-programme questionnaires. Qualitative analysis of focus group and interview data demonstrated very high levels of support for the proposed clinical programme. Quantitative analysis of questionnaire data indicated a significant, albeit non-significant, reduction in risk behaviour following the programme for adolescent boys. This suggests that mindfulness training and compassion training have the potential to be both safe and effective in reducing offending
