The objective of this study was to determine the optimum timing for extubation and discharge from hospital following laparoscopic cholecystectomy. This was a prospective observational study carried out over a two-year period, from 2003 to 2005, involving 265 patients undergoing laparoscopic cholecystectomy. Following induction of anaesthesia with intravenous fentanyl, tracheal intubation was performed, and the trachea was extubated when the patient was awake, cooperative and obeying commands. The mean tracheal intubation time was 15.6 +/- 4.2 min. The mean extubation time was 13.6 +/- 3.4 min. Of the patients, 99 (38.0%) were extubated in the operating room, 118 (44.5%) were extubated in the recovery area and 48 (18.0%) were extubated in the wards. All patients were awake and followed commands at the time of extubation. Fifty-four (20.5%) patients were ready for discharge immediately following extubation, 46 (17.4%) after 3 h, 65 (25.1%) after 6 h and 138 (51.8%) after 12 h. The most common post-operative complications were nausea, vomiting, headache and dizziness. No respiratory complications such as nasal regurgitation or laryngospasm were observed. The extubation interval of 12 h could be recommended as an appropriate timing for post-operative extubation of patients undergoing laparoscopic cholecystectomy.[Confidentiality of medical records]. Confidentiality of medical records is an important issue in management of medical records. Generally, they are very
