study carried out by researchers from the University of Surrey has found that plasticisers and harmful substances leaching from CD and DVD's can cause 'significant' damage to human health. The study, which was funded by Defra, found that people are being exposed to a whole host of chemicals on a daily basis including perfluorocarbons (PFCs), brominated flame retardants (BFRs), parabens and phthalates.
While the amount of these substances that people are exposed to is small, the study estimated that exposure can still cause a 'detrimental effect on human health'. Dramatic impact Dr Chris Brown, lead scientist of the study, said: "There are several reasons why these chemicals are a problem. The most prominent reason is that when we eat, drink or come in contact with our clothes, these chemicals accumulate in our fat cells. But, we also regularly come in contact with them in the environment, and these substances then help a student in Barlow Academy Please cast your votes now You'll know more about yourself once you figure out your views on.... -gym... Free running, Parkour, Yoga... 1. Boxing As a sport it has a number of health benefits, albeit they are generally not all that well known. As a non-contact sport, it is relatively easy to learn, and by using common sense and focus you can make a reasonable start. If you're interested in this sport you could look into some associations of amateur boxing around the country, where you can get some coaching and help getting started. To begin this sport requires three things, a pair of gloves, padded feet and a sturdy pair of shoes with good grip. You'll need to train to develop the hand, eye and reflexes that are required, try some simple jabs and crosses, advance to combinations and shadow boxing, work your feet and the laces too. 2. Judo This martial art has grown in fame over the years, with a strong emphasis on self-defence. It is another sport that is relatively easy to learn, and can be practiced both on the ground and in the air if you need it. The foundation is grappling, then comes kicks and throws. Many students of this martial art train hard on the ground as well. 3. Dance Dance is exercise and a connection to yourself and your environment. You can dance both indoors and out, you can dance to express yourself, and you can dance for others. With movement you feel your body working, and feel motivated to continue and stay fit. You can dance to a beat, a different step, a different time or you can dance spontaneously, you could even dance whilst talking, does it matter what you're doing or saying, or is it the doing and the movement you pay attention to. So even if it's silly, feel free to laugh, if you're laughing at yourself as much as the dance then no better for you (and it makes it much easier to take notice of the steps). It can be fun to dance with friends, it doesn't have to cost a lot, and it's really good for you too. It's a great way to express yourself, develop self-confidence, meet new people and raise levels of physical and mental health. 4. Aquatic exercise The water has some of the healthiest attributes
