Nizoral is an effective antifungal drug that has been used for a number of years to treat fungal infections of the scalp, and a small amount of oral nizoral is available over the counter. We report a case of possible misuse of nizoral by a user of anabolic steroids. An adult man presented with extensive cicatricial and keloidal alopecia, alopecia areata, and moustache alopecia. He was diagnosed with lichen sclerosus et atrophicus and given topical tacrolimus. He used a nizoral shampoo to treat his scalp condition, believing that he would be taking an oral drug. After using the nizoral shampoo for several months, he began to use an anabolic steroid (nomegestrol acetate) daily for five days a week. He had developed hirsutism, acne, and a worsening of his alopecia. His steroid use was stopped, and he used nizoral shampoo for a further two months. During this time he did not return to steroid use. Three months after stopping nizoral shampoo, he had returned to taking his anabolic steroid and his alopecia had not improved.import ast import re import unittest from StringIO import StringIO from test.support import run_unittest, capture_stdout, run_unittest_workspace, shutil # The re module builtin isn't always available and yields a SyntaxError. # See for further details. if not hasattr(re, 'compile'): def _test_raise_syntax_error(func, *args, **kwargs): try: func(*args, **kwargs) except SyntaxError: pass else: raise AssertionError("expected a SyntaxError exception") re.compile = _test_raise_syntax_error bff6bb2d33
